Overview

The RediNow form panel allows users to view and edit record details while browsing a data table. The form panel enables side by side editing without losing the context of the data table, reducing page navigation and enhancing edit speed.

Form panels can be configured on both the standard Data table component and the relationship data table component. By default the form Panel is not enabled. App developers should enable the form Panel on nominated data table components.

How to Enable the Form Panel

1. Open your application's page builder and choose the data table you want to adjust.
2. In the properties panel, under the Data section toggle the "form panel" property to "on" to enable the form panel for the selected data table
3. You can configure whether the form panel is docked to the right of the screen or the bottom of the screen in the form panel layout selection.
4. The default form for the selected object will be used to display the form panel. Optionally, app developers can choose another form to be used
